Seriously?

Some laws are simply weird. Here's a wacky one from Alaska:

It is considered an offense to push a live moose out of a moving airplane.

What does "bad faith" mean?

Lawyer Laurie Koller explains bad faith.

"Bad faith" is one of those terms that you have probably heard but might not know what it really means. It has to do with you being treated unfairly. Listen as Attorney Laurie Koller explains the basics.

Who is at fault in a rear-end collision?

It's bound to happen sooner or later. Almost everybody, at some time during their driving life, is involved in a rear-end collision. The typical first reaction is that fault belongs to the person in the back car, but that is not necessarily true.

What Happens If The Doctor Missed Symptoms?

Negligence and medical malpractice are major areas of concern for doctors, insurance companies, hospitals and patients alike. Of course, doctors want to provide the very best care to their patients, but sometimes problems do happen.

For instance, what if the emergency department physician does not diagnose a stroke, and then there are major complications? What makes a physician liable for the care she provides? And how does the complicated area of malpractice figure in?

Learn About Questions That Might Be Asked During Depositions Regarding Car Accidents

If you've never been involved in a legal situation, having your deposition taken might make you a little uneasy. However, working with your attorney, you can prepare to help make the event go more smoothly. Let's start with the basics.

What is a deposition?

A deposition is basically the recording of a spoken statement of a witness under oath, which happens before trial. A deposition has two main purposes:

1. To learn what a witness knows
2. To preserve their testimony.
